

NATURE TEXTURE HUNT

Nature is full of all kinds of amazing textures, just go outside and look for different textures in your own backyard or during a nature walk.

This fun and simple activity encourages your kids to touch the world around them and pay attention to small details in nature such as textures! You can start by asking your kids to gently touch things and ask them how it feels. Encourage them to use different words. Remember, there is no right, or wrong answers. Textures are pretty open to interpretation.

How to do a nature color hunt:

1. All you need is a pencil, pencil crayons, a clipboard, a nature journal or sheet of paper to describe/draw your findings.
2. You can also print off our Nature Texture Hunt with different color squares ready to fill in.
